Chart of the month

Level of corruption | Tanzania | 2014-2017

Respondents were asked: In your opinion, over the past year, has the level of corruption in this country increased, decreased, or stayed the same?

- 2014
- 2017

A heartfelt thank-you and happy new year to all whose support makes our work possible. Closing out 2017, we celebrate:

- Finding funding for a full Round 7
- Completing R7 surveys in 21 countries using our new electronic data collection system. And at least 14 more to go in 2018.
- Wrapping up R6 global releases and starting R7 country releases. Look for a steady flow of releases throughout 2018.
- Redesigning our website and online data analysis tool.
- Releasing two new videos: How tolerant are Africans? and How good are Africa’s elections?
- Launching a new M&E system.
- Improving our data visualization with staff training and Infogram software.
- Releasing geocoded AB data sets for 1999-2015 in partnership with AidData.
- Enjoying high visibility across Africa and around the world, ranging from the Ibrahim Index of African Governance, “20 Solution Proposals for the G20,” and AU and UN platforms to hundreds of news media reports
- Toasting our co-founder and executive director, Prof. E. Gyimah-Boadi, who received the 2017 Martin Luther King Jr. Award for Peace and Social Justice in recognition of his role in advancing democracy, good governance, and economic opportunity in Ghana and throughout Africa.

Support for Afrobarometer

Thanks to the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (SIDA), the Mo Ibrahim Foundation, the Open Society Foundations, the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, the U.S. State Department, the National Endowment for Democracy, and Transparency International, Afrobarometer surveys will continue in 2018. But Afrobarometer’s longer-term survival remains uncertain; voices of support will continue to be essential.
