Nigerians’ perceptions of security and armed extremism

Findings from the Round 6 Afrobarometer survey in Nigeria
At a glance

• Perceptions of insecurity: Nigerians express high levels of insecurity and of experience of crime and violence.

• Ineffective fight against violent extremists: More than half of Nigerians say the government has been largely unresponsive and ineffective in fighting armed extremists.

• Support for a united Nigeria: Two-thirds of Nigerians oppose dividing the country as a solution to the challenges of extremism.
What is Afrobarometer?

- An African-led, non-partisan survey research project that measures citizen attitudes on democracy and governance, the economy, civil society, and other topics.
- Goal: To give the public a voice in policy making by providing high-quality public opinion data to policymakers, policy advocates, civil society organisations, academics, news media, donors and investors, and ordinary Africans.
- National partners in each country conduct the survey. In Nigeria, the Afrobarometer Round 6 survey was conducted by Practical Sampling International (PSI) in collaboration with the CLEEN Foundation.
Methodology

• Nationally representative sample of adult citizens
  o All respondents are randomly selected.
  o Sample is distributed across regions and urban-rural areas in proportion to their share in the national population.
    o Sample covered 33 of Nigeria’s 36 states and the Federal Capital Territory.
    o It was not possible to conduct interviews in Adamawa, Borno, and Yobe due to unrest in the region, so substitutions of sampling units were made from neighbouring states in the same zone.
    o Each zone is represented in the sample in proportion to its share of the national population.
    o Every adult citizen has an equal chance of being selected.

• Face-to-face interviews in the language of the respondent’s choice.
Methodology (cont.)

- Standard questionnaire allows comparisons across countries and over time.

- Sample size of 2,400 yields a margin of error of ±2% at a 95% confidence level.

- Fieldwork for Round 6 in Nigeria was conducted between 5 and 27 December 2014. (For 80 cases, supplementary interviews were conducted on 18 and 19 January 2015.)
Key findings

• Almost four in 10 Nigerians (39%) do not feel safe in their neighbourhoods. One-third (33%) say they feared crime in their homes. Almost one-third (31%) experienced theft, and 20% were physically attacked.

• More than half of Nigerians say the government has been unresponsive and ineffective in fighting armed extremists.

• One-third or more of Nigerians believe that “most” or “all” senior officials in the federal government, members of the Nigerian military, and members of the National Assembly are involved in assisting extremist groups.

• Poverty and unemployment are seen as the main reasons people join extremist groups.

• Four in 10 Nigerians (39%) favour dividing the country as a solution to the challenges of extremism.

Suggestions for fighting extremism
Respondents were asked: In your opinion, what do you think would be the best way for the government to be more effective in addressing the problem of armed extremists in our country? (%)
Respondents were asked: Which of the following statements is closest to your view? Choose Statement 1 or Statement 2. (%)
Statement 1: Nigeria should remain united as one country even if the extremist groups continue to cause problems.
Statement 2: If the problems caused by the extremist groups cannot be resolved, Nigeria should be split into two countries.
(Note: An earlier version of this briefing reported an incorrect proportion in favour of dividing the country.)
Conclusion
Insecurity and violent extremism will be high priorities for Nigeria’s incoming government. Although the Afrobarometer Round 6 survey was conducted before recent successes in fighting extremist violence, the perceptions and experiences reflected in its findings provide a rich menu of citizen feedback for the government to work with in setting its new agenda.
